

Town Quay Park - Concept

Parterre

Parterres are particularly indicative of this period. The nearest example is in the Tudor House garden.

Although they look very elaborate, once established, they could be relatively low maintenance with dwarf hedges needing cutting twice a year and the lavender needing clipping directly after flowering.

